Hairdressing apprenticeship shortage

The BBC has reported that the number of hairdressing apprenticeships has halved between 2016 and 2020. The National Hair and Beauty Federation also expect a further drop of numbers in the next year. The drop is accounted for by a rise in those becoming self employed, so not taking on apprentices on in the industry and also, the closures and financial impact brought about by the COVID-19 pandemic. It is hoped that government incentives being offered to employers to encourage them to take on an apprentice may help with this situation.

Early Careers Survey 2021: Jobs apprenticeship and post graduate study

Study carried out by Prospects which explores the impact of the pandemic on the UK's young people. The report identifies a lot of change and uncertainty in terms of the career plans of young people. It also highlights the fact that young people feel unprepared due to fewer work experience opportunities and paid internships.

To me, this report highlights more than ever the need for impartial careers guidance in schools, sixth forms, colleges and universities to help young people navigate the current economic climate and understand the labour market.

London updates

Construction Skills Network, Labour Market Intelligence Report, 2021-2025 Greater London

The latest construction skills network report has been published for the Greater London area. The report shows the overall make up of the construction sector in Greater London with commercial being the largest area of construction, followed by infrastructure and housing. Repair and maintenance accounts for almost a third of all construction work in Greater London.

In terms of recruitment, 17,250 new workers will be required with much of this growth in site and project managers.

Staff shortages in London hospitality industry

The Mayor of London has pledged to support the hospitality industry as it tackles a staff shortage caused by both the pandemic and changes to immigration rules post Brexit.
